WHITE WINES

Chardonnay

This grape variety makes serious wines and ridiculous ones too and has been slated by the chattering classes. The truth is that in subtle hands and of great terroir it amazes, and in careless wine factories it is over-oaked and tastes terrible – Do not worry, none of that gets into the Goldstone Cellar.

WHITE WINES

Pinot Grigio/Pinot Gris

French/Italian grape variety hence the interchangeability of gris and grigio which describes the bluish-grey grapes. The Italians love this as a café wine but the Alsatian's make serious concentrated wine and the New World is exploring all over the place.

11	Il Palù, Pinot Grigio, Friuli - Grave DOC, Italy	2017	£24

Riesling

Produces wines of great purity that often show great intensity and verve. Yes the historic styles were sweeter, but this was a reflection of cooler times when the most attractive wines were the richest (ripest and sweetest). Fruit character ranges from green apples and pears, lemon and lime citrus, through the likes of pineapple, peach, apricot and guava – and everything in between! Modern drier styles are helping Riesling to gain support with a new wave of drinkers who are looking for a change from New World Sauvignon.

Crisp & Mineral

A lively mix of delightfully fresh and zingy whites: Colombard is a modest alternative to Kiwi Sauvignon that punches above its weight; Picpoul is a brilliant seafood wine that continues to thrill the UK; we've a peachy/mineral Albariño from the verdant north-west of Spain; Rocky Road is a gorgeously silky Bordeaux Blend. We have a trio of the more unusual too: Dédicace is a sophisticated oaked cuvée grown and made within sight of the Pyrenees; Savennières is considered by many to be the epitome of dry Chenin from the Loire; and the sun-drenched, intensely refreshing Assyrtiko will surprise and delight in equal measure.

WHITE WINES

Sauvignon Blanc

A green skinned grape that has stormed the world from its home of France. The whites of the Loire – Mers, Sancerre, Pouilly Fumé demonstrate what amazing things can be achieved with this grape. Often grown in cooler areas this encourages steady slow growth developing herbaceous, acidic fruit flavours which are fresh and clean. Pouilly Fumé is a wonderful example of the smoky, grapefruit flavour of top notch wine.

An early-ripening variety that produces distinctive, aromatic, racy white wines. New Zealand continues to drive a growing global interest in Sauvignon Blanc, but South Africa is an excellent source - wines that combine European and New World styles. France remains the benchmark and Loire the epitome but don't overlook the wonderful barrel-fermented Doisy-Daëne from the late, great Denis Dubourdieu.

ROSÉ WINES

A grape's colour comes from the skin almost all grape flesh is clear and white, so for rosé the wine maker leaves skin with the juice and the longer you leave them in contact with the solids the more colour and tannin you extract.

Champagne

The drink of celebration. There is nothing to beat the anticipation of the pop of the cork and the froth and bubbles as the glasses are poured. The fizz is created by secondary fermentation in the bottle which is why the bottles are strong and the cork wired down. Champagne has controlled the use of the word but many regions of the world use the same method to create celebratory drinks. Tanners Cava has featured on the Goldstone wine list for nearly 30 years purely on the grounds of super consistent quality and it is incredibly drinkable.

Joseph Perrier Châlons-en-Champagne

Joseph Perrier was founded in 1825. It is still family owned and independent, with Jean-Claude Fourmon at the head. The House sources a third of its grapes from its own vineyards and the rest from contracted, long standing suppliers throughout the region. The cellars are traditional, buried deep in the chalk, but the production facilities are all modern. The Champagne style is classic and elegant toward delicate. We have chosen recently to list their Champagne, firstly and most importantly we loved the wine from the first sip and as a serious Champagne House they are still a family business and of a scale that Goldstone is important to them.

Veuve Clicquot

The yellow label of the Widow Clicquot's Champagne is a Goldstone tradition which dates back to our first wine list. What a fantastic approach to life that in the adversity of widowhood the Madame Clicquot developed and created one of the earliest markets for the celebratory drink of Champagne back in 1772. Extraordinary and Goldstone was founded by a woman of similar disposition.

Bollinger

Bollinger's distinctive dry, biscuity style has long been favoured in England, the most important market for this is relatively small, but well-formed Champagne house. The style owes much to fermentation of the wine in oak barrels which is unusual in the Champagne region. Madame Lily Bollinger famously had an excuse to drink Bollinger in any state on mind.

Other Traditional Method Sparkling Wines

I don't want to get in trouble with the Champenoise but these wines are made by the same method as Champagne but not grapes from that region.

I think that makes our position clear enough! The 'Traditional Method' essentially means the wine's second fermentation happens in the bottle – which is where we get the bubbles. There is some wonderful value to be found outside of the north of France, and it is our duty to bring some of them to your attention

211	Tanners Cava Brut, Penèdes, Spain	NV	£25	£4.80
215	Crémant du Jura, Brut, Zéro Dosage, Champ Divin, France	2016	£43

English Sparkling Wine

English sparkling wine is on trend. Our favourite is from Camel Valley, Cornwall set up by the Lindo family, son Sam is in charge of wine making and as early as 2005 they won their first International Wine Challenge Gold medal for sparkling wine, the only non-Champagne wine to do so that year. Can you imagine how impressive and exciting that was and demonstrates foresightedness of the IWC.

Charmat Method Sparkling Wines

Prosecco, her neighbours and similar styles of Fizz

Besides some niche old curios that are rarely seen in the UK (so far), most Prosecco is produced according to the Charmat method: Instead of a second fermentation in bottle, it is done in tank. Better suited to fruitier styles that won't mature in the same way as Traditional Method wines, they are quicker to produce and to market, hence the keener prices.

210	Rosè Vino Frizzante, Veneto, Fabio Creschin, Italy	NV	£24	£4.60
212	Tanners Prosecco DOC Treviso, Italy	NV	£28	£5.35

RED WINES

Decanting

We have indicated the wines we feel will benefit from decanting - either to remove sediment and/or to help open the wine up. As ever with wine there will be 1000s of personal views on this and we will happily decant any red wine you would prefer. There is no doubt this will soften the tannins of all wines a little quicker but of course you may prefer a little austerity.

Grenache/GSM

Grenache is often blended with Shiraz and other varieties in the south of France, especially the Rhône, and famously in Châteauneuf-du-Pape (where 13 varieties are permitted in the blend).

GSM blends are well suited to hotter, drier climates and this is a principle reason for their popularity in Australia and other New World countries. These are wholesome, satisfying full-bodied wines and full-flavoured too.

Shiraz/Syrah

Typically blackberry and fragrant pepper, with much more besides, depending on region, age and winemaking. Old World Syrah tends to be more savoury and a little lighter; New World Shiraz can hit higher alcohol levels and sweeter, jammier fruit – but both styles see plenty of overlap. We've got a lovely balance here, and some genuine rarities!

RED WINES

Malbec

Like most grapes you've ever heard of (and tons you haven't), Malbec hails from south west France. It produces deeply-coloured, tannic wines and is used as a seasoning variety in Bordeaux, to beef up Merlot and Cabernet – especially when it shows its aromatic best. Modern Argentinean clones are much easier-going in terms of tannin and have great fruit: the Piedra Negra is impressive, chunky and toasty; Blue Melosa hints at the great potential of Argentina.

68	Bodega Piedra Negra Malbec Reserva, François Lurton, Mendoza, Argentina	2017	£31
69	Gouguenheim Flores del Valle 'Blue Melosa', Valle Escondido, Argentina	2014	£35

Cabernet Sauvignon

The King of black grapes, responsible for the great wines of the Médoc (Left Bank of Bordeaux), their Californian counterparts, and any number of great New World examples. Demands a long growing season, warmth and plenty of sunshine, to best temper its tannins and to produce the most unctuous cassis fruit. Cabernet can be extremely long-lived, and bottle-age brings complex aromas and flavours of wood, tobacco, earth, dried fruits and minerals.

Vintage Bottle

Gamay

The traditional variety of Beaujolais: Light-bodied and low in tannin, with bright acidity and charming red fruit, as well as a natural peppery, savoury-earthy mineral character. I think these wines over-hyped themselves in the nineties but a leaner few years has made makers up their game in terms of both quality and more sensible pricing.

84	Côte de Brouilly, Les Volcaniques, J Charlet	2016	£26
85	Fleurie, André Colonge et Fils	2016	£31

Pinot Noir

This is the grape variety of Burgundy - home of the finest red wines. Pinot Noir is a tricky grape to grow but defines beautifully the style and character of the soil it grows in. That's why the land on the Côte d'Or changes hands rarely and at astronomic prices.

RED WINES

Merlot

The ubiquitous Merlot, apparently so-called because it is a favourite of blackbirds (Merle). It makes up the majority of plantings in Bordeaux, where it ripens earlier and more dependably than Cabernet, and it is the principle variety for the great wines of Saint-Emilion and Pomerol on the Right Bank. Merlot tends to produce softer, fleshier and juicier wines than Cabernet, for example, often with a plummy fruit character ; riper examples bring more power and richness and can benefit from oak ageing.

Portugal

Portugal is perhaps the most exciting producer anywhere right now: a rich library of indigenous varieties and ancient vineyards, from all over the country, but the wines from the dramatic Douro Valley offer the greatest potential. The Douro has produced table wines under its own DOC since 1979, but the past decade has seen an explosion in interest and quality. These are gorgeous, aromatic, supple and complex wines; delicious in their youth, they age well and can develop like good Claret.

90	Churchill Estates Tinto, Douro Valley	(Decanted) 2013	£27
91	Esporão Reserva Red, Alentejo	(Decanted) 2014	£32

Spain

Good ol' comfy Spain, home of Rioja, and er... well lot's actually, although the power of Rioja as a brand has somewhat contributed to numerous copycat wines (and entire regions!), and rather hamstrung the smaller, less fashionable and emerging production areas. Some smart value here, not least in Tom and Emma Holt's 'first step', a blend based on Merlot, with Cabernet and Tempranillo.

Italy

Italy usually competes with France for the title of World's largest wine producing country, and it is arguably more diverse in terms of the sheer number of sub-regions. Old World countries are intrinsically tied to history, and the patchwork nature of Italy with regards wine regions reflects her complicated political past. Back to the wine: Nebbiolo rules the north west with Barolo and Barbaresco; Pinot Grigio and Prosecco make up enormous sales from the north east; Sangiovese (aka Brunello) is responsible for the Tuscan greats of Chianti and Montalcino; and the wild south is home to many indigenous, exciting varieties.

Private Collection

We renovated the ancient Goldstone cellars which are brick vaulted and date back to the 1760's. This provided us with a cellarage area where we can lay down fine and long living wines. This will enable us to build up a stock of fine wines which we will be able to offer at sensible prices. All wines listed below are drinking well now and will lie down for years to come.

RED

All red wines in from the Private Collection will be decanted and checked for cork taint before being served. Please if you have views on length of time for the wine to breathe, let us know.

BORDEAUX

PC12	Château Meyney, Saint-Estèphe Aromas of creamy, dark, liqueur-esque blackberry fruit, some leafy cassis, toast and roasted coffee. Creamy, mellow and earthy on the palate, all developing very nicely.	2011	£60
PC 5	La Gravette de Certan, Vieux Château Certan, Pomerol The second wine of Vieux Châteaux Certan: leafy red berries, plum and graphite; silky, with good power and delicious already.	2012	£60
PC 8	Château Angludet, Margaux Medium bodied, soft and forward. The late Peter Sichel visited Goldstone and we have cellared wines from Château Angludet virtually all our 30 years here. His son Ben is a brilliant wine maker. 2012 tested the wine maker but Ben produced perfect balance of fruit, freshness and elegance.	2012	£67
PC10	Château Pédesclaux, 5me cru Pauillac Nicely concentrated, dense and very rounded, with soft supple tannins and a very fruit-forward personality. Classic notes of pencil lead, tobacco and cedar, pronounced cassis and savoury, smoky, gamey dark fruit flavours.	2004	£69
PC18	Château Calon-Ségur, 3 ^{me} cru Saint-Estèphe Impressively detailed and complex aromas of spicy red fruits, cassis, roasted coffee and ink; there are wonderful, developed, autumnal notes of earth, tobacco and cedar, olive and iodine.	1996	£123

BURGUNDY

PC4	Santenay vieilles vignes, Vincent Girardin Very attractive, earthy dark fruits, a mix of wild flowers and sweet berries. Nicely weighted, expressive stuff that is a little more savoury towards the finish. A cracking all-rounder from an estate that leans heavily to biodynamics and properly sustainable practices.	2014	£44
PC7	Marsannay, Méo-Camuzet Frère & Soeurs Pretty red fruits, especially raspberry and cherry, a little spiciness and at times a touch of game. The palate is very fine and fresh, with low levels of tannins and bright acidity. A nice age for it, offering a little more fatness now.	2013	£48
PC14	Nuits-Saint-Georges 1er cru Les Vaucrains, Henri Gouges Dense, generous, spicy and floral nose showing a little creamy oak and touches of mocha alongside black cherry. Fairly powerful stuff, well-built and muscular but with plenty of charm too. There is so very little Gouges out there due to a run of painfully small harvests.	2013	£86

- PC15 Volnay 1er cru Les Santenots du Milieu, Domaine de Comtes Lafon 2011 £116
Expressive, charming stuff on the nose offering sweet red fruits, polished dark berries and cherry, Asian spices and a little smoke. Silky and well-defined with good mineralité and ample savoury elements to balance the richness.
- PC 27 Charmes-Chambertin Grand cru, Vincent Girardin 2010 £145
Charmes Chambertin is approximately 50 acres of the Gevrey Chambertin appellation and revered worldwide. This has a rich nose including brambley fruit – fine silky palate – Exceptionally long finish

RHÔNE

- PC13 Châteauneuf-du-Pape, Domaine Font de Michelle 2001 £65
Wonderful mature Châteauneuf from a superb vintage: spicy, earthy forest floor and dried fruits, raisin, orange rind, tapenade and leather. Harmonious, showing a little muscle and some attractive crisp pockets. A bit of a treat!
- PC11 Côte-Rôtie Côte Brune, Giles Barge France 2012 £68
This big Syrah(Shiraz) is dark fruits, oak and smoke bordering on raunchy. Giles Barge is the President of the Côte Rôtie syndicate and leads the way in unquestionably one of the most elegant expressions of the appellation. (Decanted)
- PC26 Châteauneuf-du-Pape, Domaine du Vieux Télégraphe 2007 £74
A stunning vintage for Télégraphe, this offers a beautiful aromatic mix of garrigue, liqueur-like red raspberry and cherry fruit, blueberry, fig and more besides. There is a mineral core, the tannins are ripe, the wine shows great balance and freshness. Seamless. (Decanted)
- PC28 Châteauneuf-du-Pape, Château de Beaucastel, Pierre Perrin 1993 £75
Pierre Perrin – One of the great families of Châteauneuf-du-pap. This is from a great long lived vintage. (Decanted)

AUSTRALIA

KAESLER

Kaesler's Alte Reben is a single vineyard wine coming from 117 year old shiraz vines in the Maranga sub region of the Barossa Valley. Considered to produce the most complex wines in Australia. Outstanding quality and elegant (that's right and Australian)

- PC19 Alte Reben Shiraz, Barossa Valley 2012 £85
Deep garnet colour. Powerful concentrated and full bodied. Tiny production of 500 cases and one is tucked away in the Goldstone Cellar – This is rare, highly lauded by top wine pundits and very rarely seen at a UK restaurant one for the early adopter.

GERMANY

- PC16 Henkenberh Spätburgunder Großes Gewächs, Salwey, Baden 2015 £44
*Grown in volcanic soils in the (very) warm south of Germany, this has wonderful depth and richness of raspberry, cassis and plum fruit. This shows great poise too – with some cool flinty/stony mineral touches and spicy floral notes, and even a little citrus!
 Did you know Germany was the world's third largest producer of Pinot Noir?
 (Grosses Gewächs means 'Great Growth', comparable to the French 'Grand Cru')*

SOUTH AFRICA

- PC20 Galpin Peak Pinot Noir, Bouchard-Finlayson, Walker Bay 2015 £47
Great nose of cherry cola, dark berries and rich red fruits – all very tantalising, which belies the freshness and finesse of the palate: Crisp red fruit, wild strawberry, some smoky oak and a little wildness. Lightly grippy and stimulating with great length of flavour.

USA

Vintage Bottle

- PC22 Nicolas-Jay Pinot Noir, Willamette Valley, Oregon 2014 £87
Produced from their own Bishop's Creek vineyard, and fruit sourced across choice plots of the Willamette Valley: liqueur-like red cherry with some crisp redcurrant and raspberry; bright and lively with silky tannins and a deliciously rich rounded finish. Nicolas-Jay is a new collaborative endeavour between long-term friends Jean-Nicolas Méo of Domaine Méo-Camuzet (Vosne-Romanée) and Jay Boberg (founder of IRS records).

WHITE

- PC 3 Chablis 1^{er} cru Côte de Léchet, Daniel-Etienne Defaix, France 2003 £50
Deeply mineral, wonderfully pure and poised; notes of honey or beeswax, nut and biscuit give way to stone fruits on the nose and a palpable sense of tension. The palate is perfectly fresh, despite the vintage; complex and saline-tinged with warm spices, more developed fruit and tertiary notes, and excellent length. Daniel Defaix specialises in late-released Chablis and this is a perfect segue in to the rich delights that await the patient
- PC 1 Condrieu, Andre Perret, Rhone, France 2015 £60
Peach, apricot, more exotic fruits and flowers besides spicy and also mineral. This is the epitomie of Viogner from one of the world's great producers and pretty rare : silky and creamy in parts yet wonderfully fresh, long and beautifully defined.
- PC2 Chablis grand cru Les Clos, Domaine Christian Moreau Père & Fils, France 2011 £100
Very rich, mouth-filling and opulent from an exceptionally small yet massively concentrated and rich vintage. Beautiful white fruits, rock pools, wet stones and pretty floral notes; this is textured, silky and very long with intense mineral flavours. Don't rush it – this is approaching its peak drinking window and it has an awful lot to offer!
